Introduction

Why is ESG so important for businesses?

More and more companies take ESG (Environment, Social and Governance) standards into account in their business strategies. Global trends clearly show that businesses are no longer evaluated only on the basis of their financial results. Nowadays, such standards are key to the value of growing businesses, customer relations, broader business environment, and to helping strengthen the entrepreneur's image as a responsible business. ESG standards are being internalised and becoming important values not only for companies themselves but also for investors, partners, lenders, customers, and current and future employees.

Why is ESG a very important legal issue?

The application of ESG standards means great development potential for companies. On the other hand, they entail additional legal obligations, which are very often complex and result from different pieces of legislation. Lawyers are business advisors. Law firms need to effectively support their clients in their efforts towards sustainable development.

This means that ESG is becoming not only a very important business trend but also a highly topical legal issue.

Why should lawyers care about ESG standards?

ESG is also important for lawyers, as it is for any human being. We are part of the society and share the same future. Our attitude towards the environment and the way we want to conduct our businesses are evolving.

Also, we need to be credible. If we want to help our clients to achieve their ambitious ESG goals, we cannot just stand by and look on without transformation our own businesses coupled with the transformation of our Clients' businesses. ESG is changing the legal industry.

Come to the UIA Business Law Forum (BLF) in Warsaw to learn more about ESG, and the way it affects businesses worldwide, learn about its impact upon the legal sector!

Mark your diaries now, save the date and make sure to register!

We are looking forward to welcoming you to Warsaw!

15:15 – 15:45 Coffee Break

15:45 – 17:00 Session 4 – Tax Law/Foreign Investment

Taxation plays a significant role in developing ESG standards, as taxes and fiscal policies are basic instruments to foster human rights, while tax abuse prevents the effective promotion of ESG standards-based policies.

States have addressed the challenges posed by globalisation and digitisation of the economy, but these individual attempts have proved insufficient or inadequate.

Public opinion and political pressure on large, multinational companies seem to have laid down the building blocks of a new international taxation framework. US and EU pressure on digital giants has paved the way for the OECD two-pillar solution to address these tax challenges. Inevitably, the tax measures that may result from this approach will eventually permeate domestic tax systems of many countries and apply to most (if not all) economic sectors.

The chances and threads of these developments and their impact in pursuing ESG standards will be discussed in this session, particularly the need to adapt to new foreign investment structures.

Each jurisdiction has made its own progress, having different levels of adaptation so far, while projected foreign direct investments of multinational groups out of US and EU have commenced to adjust the configuration of their business approach, making focus on ESG as a key concept to be developed.

Moderator: • Martí ADROER, Cuatrecasas, Barcelona, Spain

17:00 – 18:15 Session 5 – Impact of the ESG upon Compliance Programmes. Do we Need a New Compliance Culture?

This panel will discuss about a broad range of questions on compliance programmes: What is the relationship between existing compliance polices and ESG? How to effectively combine ESG into the existing compliance policies and teams? What challenges do organisations face while implementing their ESG policies? Will ESG replace compliance? Will they be part of the same corporate culture? Or is ESG just a short lived trend?
